

14 Dix Place, May 25, 1858.

Dear Friend Jackson:

178 I know you will pardon me for raising the inquiry, whether our worthy friend, Mrs. Lucy N. Coleman, of Rochester, N. Y., can be accommodated with a bed at your house to-night, as we happen to be full. She has just arrived ^{from} ~~at~~ Springfield, and has some acquaintance in Roxbury, but hardly knows how to find them this evening. I presume you will be full after to-night, and perhaps it will be really inconvenient to entertain Mrs. C. to-night. If so, you will frankly say so; and we will try to arrange matters for her somewhere at home. Ever yours, W. L. G.

W L Garrison
Lucy Colman
May 1858